Re: Waymo LLC v. Uber Technologies, LLC, et al., Case No. 3:17-cv-00939-WHA: Otto Trucking's Response to Waymo's Precis Seeking Permission to File Motion for Summary Judgment

Dear Judge Alsup,

In accordance with the Court's August 23, 2017 Order (Dkt. 1308), Otto Trucking objects to Waymo's precis seeking leave to file summary judgment as to Defendants' affirmative defenses. First, Waymo's precis is confusing as it identifies the affirmative defenses asserted by Uber/Ottomotto, but includes Otto Trucking in its request. To the extent that Waymo has not addressed affirmative defenses asserted by Otto Trucking, those affirmative defenses are not subject to Waymo's request for summary judgment.

Second, Otto Trucking disagrees that summary judgment is warranted because Otto Trucking did not propound interrogatories specifically addressing its affirmative defenses. See Dkt. 1301. This argument is irrelevant. Indeed, Plaintiff's cited case states that summary judgment is based on the "pleadings, depositions, answers to interrogatories, and admissions on file"—not just the interrogatories propounded viewed in isolation. Celotex Corp. v. Catrett, 477 U.S. 317, 322 (1986). Otto Trucking has obtained substantial evidence supporting its affirmative defenses from other discovery processes besides interrogatories.

Waiver/ Estoppel

Otto Trucking has a strong waiver/estoppel defense. The evidence shows that (1) Mr. Levandowski told Google at the latest during his exit interview that he was considering starting a company devoted to developing self-driving trucks, (2) after he left Google and started that business, Mr. Levandowski remained in contact with Google employees, including Waymo's CEO Mr. Krafcik and repeatedly offered to show Mr. Krafcik the self-driving truck he was developing, and (3) without ever accepting Mr. Levandowski's offer, and with knowledge of what he was developing, Google still paid him $ [REDACTED] and delayed bringing this lawsuit.

Prior to leaving Google, Anthony Levandowski had disclosed to his superiors and others in the company his interest in starting an autonomous trucking business. Ex. 1. In his exit interview on the day he departed Anthony Levandowski had disclosed that he had started an autonomous trucking business. Ex. 2. After he left, Mr. Levandowski remained in contact with John Krafcik, the CEO of Chauffeur/Waymo. [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] g. See Ex. 3 (text messages between Anthony Levandowski and John Krafcik). [REDACTED]

[REDACTED] Id. at WAYMO-UBER-00033606.

While Mr. Krafcik was keeping in close contact with Mr. Levandowski, Waymo was investigating Mr. Levandowski's activities prior to his departure from Google. Indeed, shortly after Mr. Levandowski's departure, [REDACTED] See Ex. 4. Google initiated a forensic investigation of Mr. Levandowski in February 2016. Gary Brown, the security engineer who performed the forensic investigation of Mr. Levandowski, testified that as early as August 2016, Google was aware that Mr. Levandowski had downloaded the 14,000 files from Google's server. See Ex. 5.

In a text message dated August 11, 2016, Mr. Levandowski again offered Mr. Krafcik a demo of his self-driving truck. That same day, despite awareness of Mr. Levandowski's self-driving trucking business, access to Mr. Levandowski's truck, and likely knowledge of Mr. Levandowski's alleged downloading of documents, Google paid Mr. Levandowski's remaining bonus from his time on Project Chauffeur. See Ex. 6.

These facts demonstrate Waymo's knowledge of the alleged misconduct and its express waiver of the claim by Mr. Krafick's statement that Google would be warm and supportive of Mr. Levandowski's endeavors, and implied waiver based on its payment of Anthony Levandowski's bonus after it was likely aware of the alleged misconduct.

Laches and Failure to Mitigate Damages

As stated above, Waymo was aware of the alleged downloading of information that is the basis of its misappropriation claim as early as August 2016. And yet, it did not file any action for misappropriation of trade secrets or seek an injunction until the end of February 2017. This delay was unreasonable and prejudicial (laches) and also demonstrates Waymo's failure to mitigate any damages it may claim it suffered. (Of course, Waymo still has not disclosed any viable damages claim specific to Otto Trucking, so arguing about how Waymo failed to mitigate its non-existent damages is difficult at this stage).

Unclean Hands

Discovery has shown for a number of years, Waymo purchased Velodyne LiDAR systems. See Ex. 7.

[REDACTED]. See Ex. 8. Thus, to the extent that any of Waymo's purported trade secrets are also found in Velodyne LiDARs, Waymo may have misappropriated them from Velodyne or other third parties' whose technology Waymo has purchased.

Otto Trucking also incorporates and joins Uber/Ottomotto's response to Waymo's Precis.

Respectfully submitted,
